

HADDON LIBRARY NEWS

EASTER 2021

IN THIS ISSUE

- The Haddon Library during Easter term
- Classes and writing sessions for Easter term
- New online resources to explore
- Pinterest boards of new ebooks
- CUL research skills webinars

THE HADDON LIBRARY DURING EASTER TERM

- The library will be open M-F with bookable study spaces from 10-1 or 2-5. If you are more than an hour late for your slot, however, it might go to a waiting student. Please book only one spot/day to maximise space. And bring extra layers because the windows will be open!
- You can book an appointment to collect/return books. The table in the building foyer is the collection/drop-off point for books this term. We regret that open browsing of the library shelves is not currently permitted.
- We will be offering a series of online classes on academic reading, writing and referencing. The calendar of classes is on the library's website.

NEW ONLINE RESOURCES TO EXPLORE

The University Library recently announced on its blog, the acquisition of several important online resources for students and researchers. Databases of particular interest to social anthropology and archaeology include:

- Oxford Encyclopedia of Ancient Egypt
- Native American Indians, 1645-1819
- Caribbean Newspapers, 1718-1876
- African newspapers collections
- South Asian Newspapers, 1864-1922
- Slavery, Abolition and Social Justice, 1490-2007

All 1000+ databases that the university subscribes to are available from the Databases A-Z page, and are searchable by name, subject and type.

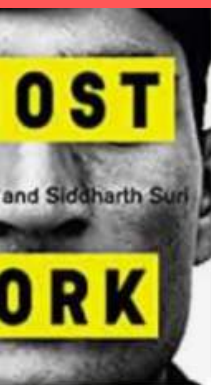

CLASSES AND WRITING SESSIONS FOR EASTER TERM

The Haddon Library is offering a series of online classes on academic reading, writing and referencing (times GMT)

- Referencing Surgery for Dissertations (Mondays in May, 4.00-5.00 pm)
- Reading Retreat for Dissertation Writers (May 6 and May 13)
- How to Write When You Do Not Want to Write (May 20 and May 27)
- Shut Up and Write (Monday mornings; 3-hour writing session for MPhils and PhDs)

Classes and writing sessions are bookable from the library's website, and are open to students in Archaeology, Social Anthropology and Sociology.

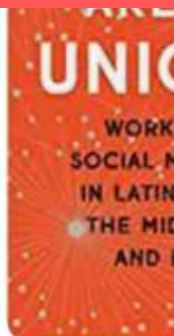

LOOKING FOR BRILLIANT PLACES TO START YOUR RESEARCH?
BE SURE TO CHECK OUT THE LIBRARY'S ARCH/ANTH LIBGUIDE

How to stop Silicon building a new...

Owners of the map : motorcycle taxi drivers, mobility, and...

Where are the u and social move

PINTEREST BOARDS OF NEW EBOOKS

During the pandemic, the Haddon library has purchased more ebooks than print. To promote our new ebook collections, we have created Pinterest boards that link through to iDiscover records. To view all of our ebook acquisitions for 2021, please see:

- Ebooks purchased in January and February 2021
- Ebooks purchased in March 2021

As always, we maintain complete lists of all book purchases (print and electronic) via spreadsheets available on our website.

CUL RESEARCH SKILLS TRAINING

Cambridge University Libraries have launched a new series of Research Skills webinars for Easter Term. These sessions aim to develop research skills in finding, managing and sharing information. The classes are taught by librarians around the university, including your Haddon librarian! Topics include:

- Finding sources for your literature review
- Note making for dissertations
- Writing for publication
- Copyright and creative commons
- Referencing
- Managing your data
- Effective literature searching
- Depositing your electronic thesis

Please visit bit.ly/ResearchSkillsET2021 to view the schedule and to book a spot.

STAY SAFE | STAY IN TOUCH

HADDON WEBSITE

HADDON TWITTER

