THE HADDON LIBRARY IN MICHAELMAS TERM

- We are pleased to say that the library is now open its regular hours of 8:45am to 5:15pm, Monday-Friday (9:00-5:00 in vacations). We are closed weekends, however, for the time being.
- In terms of Covid restrictions, you no longer need to book a study space or time to collect/return your loans. However, we will need to keep the windows open for ventilation, so you might want to wear layers when you visit. Further, in line with university guidance, we encourage you to wear a face covering as a courtesy to others.
- Tours: From October 11th to the 15th, we are offering 15-minute tours of the library at 10:30, 2:30 and 4:00. You can book a tour spot via our website, or just show up at the designated time.

NEW WEBSITE FOR THE HADDON LIBRARY

The Haddon Library has a new website designed to highlight its collections and services and to be a portal for finding scholarly literature (particularly for dissertations) and finding skills training across the university. On the new site, you can find information about:

- The library's holdings in Archaeology and Social Anthropology, as well as its special collections
- Wheelchair access to the library and other accessibility topics
- Library classes and tours, as well as setting up a bespoke consultation about your research or writing
- Links to the best starting places for finding scholarly articles in Archaeology and Social Anthropology
- Links to University academic skills training and resources

NEW DATABASES AND JOURNALS TO EXPLORE

Over the past several months, the university has acquired a number of interesting databases and journals:

- African Diaspora, 1860-Present
- Crossings: Journal of Migration and Culture
- Latin American and Latinx Visual Culture
- Sociology of Development
- Max Weber Studies
- Viking and Medieval Scandinavia
- Archaeometry

Please be in touch with the library if you have any trouble accessing these resources.

BE SURE TO CHECK OUT THE LIBRARY'S ARCH/ANTH LIBGUIDE

TWO GREAT TOOLS: LIBRARY ESSENTIALS GUIDE AND SPACEFINDER

- A new guide has been produced that introduces you to all things Cambridge Libraries. The Library Essentials Guide has information about using iDiscover and Reading Lists Online, library accessibility topics, training/tours and how the 100+ libraries at Cambridge all work together,
- Looking for new and interesting places to study around Cambridge? Spacefinder finds the best nooks and niches closest to you, based on your specific criteria (e.g., noise level, accessibility, size and other parameters). It's a great to explore Cambridge!

CUL RESEARCH SKILLS CLASSES

Cambridge University Libraries have launched a new series of Research Skills classes for Michaelmas Term. These sessions aim to develop skills in finding, managing and sharing information. The classes are taught by librarians around the university, including your Haddon librarian! Topics include:

- Academic reading and notemaking
- Developing your literature review
- How to write when you do not want to write
- Copyright and creative commons
- Referencing without tears
- Managing your data
- Depositing your electronic thesis

Please visit the Researcher Development Programme site to view the schedule and book a spot.
